The Mining Camp

Yesterday's Post has the follow-

The affairs of the mining camp are booming along, and everything there looks as prosperous and realistic as did the old time mining camps which formed the nucleus of the principal towns in Nevada.

Sam Davis is already on the ground and has issued the first edition of the Midwinter Fair Appeal, which bids fair to be one of the principal features of the big exposition and particularly of the '49 camp district, in that it is full of interesting stories and other reading matter, penned by the choicest of California writers. In fact Editor Sam and his brother Bob, who is a news "digger" from a way back, have started a paper that is going to make things hum out at the fair.

Among the latest visitors to the camp and one who has come to stay is Mrs. Sandy Johnson from the Sagebrush State whom Mark Twain, Bret Harte and other California writers have frequently referred to as the Nevada secress. She is a little old woman about 70 years of age who dropped in on the miners severwhich attracted her entire attention severe. and, as she said, recalled her to many such scenes years ago in a Nevada cabin. Finally she promised Engineer George B. Jefferis, who to visit the camp again and cook a meal for the miners, which was a ed. Next day the "Secress" kept Olga Ayers, the agent at that place, her promise, and when the meal was over she was so enthusiastic aver t
